It is a parenthetical referencing system that is made up of two main components: In-text citations including the author's surname and the year of publication should be shown in brackets wherever another source has contributed to your work. A reference list outlining all of the sources directly cited in your work. While in-text citations are used to briefly indicate where you have directly quoted or paraphrased a source, your reference list is an alphabetized list of complete Harvard citations that enables your reader to locate each source with ease. In addition to the citation options that are included in Word by default, you can add custom citation styles, such as Vancouver, to create the bibliographies and reference materials you want.
